about England's history!

- Queen Elizabeth is distantly related to Vlad the Impaler. Sparkling wine was invented in England. Winchester was the first capitol of England. There is an annual cheese roll that has been going on for a very long time. The first

England culture

- England's contribution to British and world culture it was too big for anything but a survey. England was a homogeneous country and had developed traditions. As the empire expanded they adapted more culture from people around the world. English culture has been changed by people in many different places like Afro-Caribbeans, Asians, Muslims, and other immigrant

5 things I like about england

- One thing I really like about England is how beautiful the landscape and scenery there is. It seems like a fun place to visit there is a lot to see there. The culture there is very interesting. There's a lot you can still learn about England if

How does fishers junior high benefit by having families from this country in our school and community?

- I think fishers benefits because if there's more Cultural diversity there's more opportunities to learn. If everyone here believed in the same thing and was from the same country it would be kind of boring. There wouldn't be as many chances to learn new things. Its good to have diverse social settings so you can know more about other people and
